

Deniz Kandiyoti is Emeritus Professor of Development Studies at SOAS, University of London, where she worked between 1992 and 2010. She holds degrees from the University of Paris (Sorbonne) and the London School of Economics and Political Science. She has worked on Turkey, post-Soviet Central Asia and Afghanistan and developed comparative perspectives on state, gender and power in the broader Muslim world. She is the author of Concubines, Sisters and Citizens: Identities and Social Transformation (in Turkish, 1997) the editor of Gender, Governance and Islam (with Nadjé Al-Ali and Kathryn Spellman Poots, 2019), Fragments of Culture: The Everyday of Modern Turkey (2002), Gendering the Middle East (1996) and Women, Islam and the State (1991) and the author of numerous articles on gender, women's rights, Islam, development and state policies, including the seminal article 'Bargaining with Patriarchy' (Gender and Society, 1988). Her groundbreaking work has been foundational to the field of Middle Eastern women's and gender studies in the UK and globally.